A message from C-Tran:

"During extreme temperatures, C-TRAN will not turn anyone away who is riding to a warming center. Passengers should tell the operator as they board that they're heading to a warming center, and fares will not be enforced. We also encourage anyone to plan ahead and stay hydrated if they expect to be out traveling."

A message from Marlow Macht, Clark County EMS, Medical Program Director:

"Particularly in the dry cold, people with limited access to water can become dehydrated because thirst cues decrease, but the body uses a lot of moisture to warm the air; people have fewer thirst cues in the dry cold. No need to hyper-hydrate; just have water or warm drinks available when possible."
